THE GLOBAL EVENT FOR BIOTECHNOLOGY

Get ready for the most important event dedicated to the growth of the biotechnology industry—the 2007 BIO International Convention.

With its world-class conference program, renowned general session and keynote speakers, growing exhibition floor, and innumerable networking opportunities, the BIO International Convention is the one and only event where new ideas, bold ventures, and global benefits come together.

The Global Event for Biotechnology

New Ideas. They're everywhere—covering the entire span of possibilities for applying biotechnology advances to every aspect of our lives.

- Learn about the most exciting and promising biotech advances in more than 200 breakout sessions in 20 tracks covering food and agriculture, global health, biopreparedness, finance, and much more.
- Get a good look at another 200 new and ongoing research projects in the Innovation Corridor Poster Sessions. Here's your chance to discover groundbreaking technologies in more than two dozen categories of biotechnology applications. If you're searching for opportunities to partner with academia and early-stage research organizations, you will find it here.
- Hear about the broader perspectives of world and industry leaders who will share their views and visions in thought-leader, keynote, and super sessions.

For more information on how to apply or to submit an abstract, visit www.bio2007.org/corridor.

Bold Ventures. Looking for them? Then plan to participate in the BIO Business Forum, which brings together the innovators with the investment partners that can take a brilliant new idea one step closer to market.

At last year's BIO International Convention, 11,000 BIO Business Forum meetings took place, bringing together more than 4,000 business leaders to present and hear business cases, exchange ideas, negotiate, and create partnerships. There's no other event in the world at which that happens.

These meetings are scheduled in advance. So register early and use the online tools at www.bio2007.org/businessforum to find all the matching business opportunities awaiting you.

Global Benefits. This is what biotechnology is all about—the new medicines, fuels, materials, foods, and the new processes for creating them—that will make life on this planet better for all human beings, the environment, and the global economy.

And, with nearly 6,000 international participants—nearly one third of total attendees—the BIO International Convention will serve as a critical forum of stakeholders—government, academic, and business leaders—from more than 60 countries.

To learn more about the services offered to international participants, or for complete international delegation information, visit www.bio2007.org/international.

BREAKOUT SESSIONS

New Ideas Poised to Deliver Global Benefits

Get ready for another stellar lineup of speakers and topics in the 2007 BIO International Convention program. More than 700 proposals were submitted for the 2007 conference program covering an extraordinary breadth and depth of innovation and reflecting the richness and vitality of the biotechnology industry. The very best of these presentation proposals have been selected to become part of the 2007 conference program.

You can choose from more than 200 sessions covering 20 important areas in biotechnology research, development, marketing, trends, best practices, and more. In addition to these breakout sessions, consider participating in the following special sessions covering growing trends and critical issues.
