Prior to the change, two (2) staff dealt with seniors' for all of Markham. Additionally, there was one person in charge of all programming and one person in charge of all of the community centres, which sometimes created space conflicts. The new model divides Markham into four (4) communities. Each community has a manager and one person responsible for both the programming and the community centre management. It also has more staff available to assist seniors', noting that the seniors' point of contact will remain the same as it was before the re-structuring.
